JAMES SAMPLE,
JOHN DARRAGH,
WILLIAM M'CANDLESS, } Commissioners of Allegheny County.

Commissioners Office, February 1st, 1808.

The Pittsburgh Gazette.

TUESDAY, March 1, 1808.

Accounts immediately from Philadelphia state, that the Federal Republicans in the eastern parts of the state, particularly in the city, are busily engaged, in endeavouring to select a candidate of integrity and abilities to fill the office of Governor, after the next election.—Several are spoken of, viz. James Ross, of Pittsburgh, Chief Justice Tilghman, and Judge Spayd, all well qualified to do justice to the appointment: the former, Mr. Ross, will most likely be taken up; his well known talents, and his services in the national council for many years, entitles him equally with any other, his suffering his name to be used on two unsuccessful occasions, gives him a preference—his appointment would be particularly useful to the Western Counties;—Would it not be proper for our citizens on this side of the mountains to meet and ascertain the general opinion on this subject.

 The Federal and Constitutional Republicans of Pittsburgh and its vicinity, are requested to meet at ROBERT SPENCER'S Tavern on Saturday Evening next, at 6 o'clock, in order to adopt some arrangements respecting the approaching Election for Governor of the State.

It is said, that Commodore Barron has made his defence before the court martial at Norfolk, and that he justified his conduct very handsomely.

It is proposed by some leading members of Congress, to ask leave of the executive to adjourn in March and convene again in May; presuming that by May the negociation will be concluded, and either war or peace ascertained.

The President has said that it cannot be determined till next week, whether congress may adjourn for two or three months. It has been proposed to adjourn the middle of March and convene agin in May.

By letters from Mexico, we learn, that in case Spain should be subjugated by Bonaparte, the people of that country are ready to throw off the yoke of foreign dominion, and to erect themselves into a distinct and independent nation. (Gaz. U. S.

A LAW QUERY.

Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad coelum.

"Land," saith Blackstone, "hath an indefinite extent upwards, as well as downwards,"—"whatever is in a direct line, between the surface of any land and the centre, belongs to the owner of the surface, as is every day's experience in the mining countries; so that land includes not only the face of the earth, but every thing under it." Now, Major K. owns the land on the top of the Coal Hill, and the side of the same hill is the property of other individuals.—To whom then does the centre of the hill belong? or who has the right to the coal contained in it, if both parties were to dig for it, the one perpendicularly into the hill, the other horizontally?

A NEW FUND FOR TURNPIKE ROADS.

MR. SERGEANT is well intitled to the applause of every patriot of Pennsylvania, for the liberality of his ideas and sentiments, so handsomely displayed in his Report upon Turnpike Roads; but the funds which he has resorted to and stated, are of such a very limited and uncertain nature, as to render them greatly inadequate to the magnitude of the object. The balance in the treasury, and the debts due from Nicholson and others, even if they were totally appropriated, are but limited sums; and the surplus of our present revenue, which must always depend upon various contingencies, is extremely uncertain for any real dependence,—especially when we reflect that such part as has hitherto been derived from the land office, must certainly and gradually diminish, until it becomes totally extinct.

My great solicitude for the improvement of Pennsylvania by Turnpikes, especially the one extending to Pittsburgh, has often prompted me to ponder upon various ways and means for accomplishing this desirable object. Amongst several sources of permanent revenue which have occurred to me, I have for a long time had my eye fixed upon one, which I am astonished to find, has hitherto escaped the notice of our legislative economists. The most superficial observer, however, cannot avoid seeing, that for a long time it has been the invariable custom of our legislative body, to spend at least four months in session every winter.—For this period of time, they have always made their regular arrangement for going into winter quarters at the public expence, whether the business was much or little, or of any importance at all.

I believe, if an accurate estimate was made of the whole expence of one session, it would be found to amount to about seventy thousand dollars. This sum is a heavy draft upon our treasury at the close of every session; and I think the question may be fairly asked, what real benefit has the people of Pennsylvania received for such payments?

Now, what I have to suggest to the economy and patriotism of our legislature, and the people of Pennsylvania generally, is, that our legislative business, in future, if it should chance to embrace any object of real and general advantage, should be conducted and prosecuted with such a degree of dispatch, as to reduce the term of a session to two months, instead of four; which I believe is nearly about the time employed by other legislative bodies. By such a plan of economy, about thirty-five, or at least thirty thousand dollars would undoubtedly be saved in our treasury, which is now wantonly expended, by the idleness of some, and the avarice of others. But we are not to expect that this evil will be long confined to the present expenditure, because the increase of representation which we are to expect in our next legislature may probably augment the expence of that body, according to the customary mode of doing business, to the enormous sum of one hundred thousand dollars per annum.

If, as as I have already suggested, what is called the business of the house, could be dispatched in half the time usually spent therein, then our future savings would amount to about fifty thousand dollars annually. This sum I would view as a permanent fund for any public object whatever, and in due time it would be capable of performing wonders upon our Turnpike Roads.

These hints are submitted to the serious consideration of our present and future representatives, and their constituents generally.

THE DREAM OF GALILEO.*

GALILEO, after having acquired a reputation in science, truly immortal, passed the evening of his life, covered with honor, at his retreat of Ancetri, near Florence. He had already lost the use of his eyes, but this did not deprive him of participating in the pleasures of spring, he could yet enjoy the song of the nightingale, the odour of the rose, and the lively recollection of the joys of his youth.

One day, during the last spring of his life, he was conducted by Viviani, the most youthful of his disciples, to a plain that surrounded his dwelling—he soon discovered that he was going too far for his strength, and, smiling on his guide, begged him not to transgress the bounds of the Florentine territory; "you know," said he, "what I have promised to the holy inquisition."—Viviani gently led him to a little hillock, on which he placed him, to repose himself—there, nearer to the flowers and odoriferous plants, surrounded by an atmosphere of perfumes, he recalled to his mind the ardent wish for liberty, which he once felt on the approach of spring, whilst confined at Rome—he was about spending the last drop of bitter feeling which he had retained against his cruel persecutors, when he suddenly checked himself, and exclaimed, "Can the spirit of Copernicus be provoked?"

Viviani, who knew nothing of the dream to which this expression referred, requested an explanation; but the old man, feeling the evening air too damp and fresh for his infirm nerves, begged to be conducted home first.

Then, after resting a few minutes, "You know, Viviani," said he, "you well know the harsh treatment I received at Rome, and how my deliverance was retarded; when I found the intercessions of my most powerful friends, the de Medici, fruitless, and that even the recantation, † to which I had submitted, remained without effect, I became filled with the most gloomy reflections on my destiny, and I threw myself upon my solitary couch, in a disposition of mind that almost led me to murmur against the dispensations of Providence.—"As far back as memory can reach (cried I to myself) has not thy life been irreproachable? full of zeal in your pursuit, have you not examined the subtleties of false philosophy, in search of the light it obscured? have you not almost exhausted the talents of intellect, to unveil truth, and to annihilate those rooted prejudices, whose powerful illusions constantly threw obstacles in your way? How often, niggard to yourself, hast thou fled from the allurements of the banquet, and dashed from your lips the bowl, which appetite burned to empty, that your eagerness for the labours of thought might not be blunted? How many hours hast thou snatched from sleep to give to study? How often, whilst all around you were enjoying the sweets of oblivion, or resting from dissipation, to regain strength for new enjoyment, how often hast thou then, shivered in the cold, that thou mightest contemplate, without interruption, the glories of the firmament, or watched when the heavens were clouded, whole nights, by the pale light of thy lamp, to demonstrate the wisdom of the supreme being, and instruct mankind? Wretch! what is now the reward of your toil! what the fruits of your attempts to glorify your creator, and enlighten the world? Chagrin and despair have nearly dried up the sources of sight; your eyes are failing every instant, and the tears that you shed, will soon extinguish their almost expiring power."

"Such, my dear Viviani, were my reflections at the moment; then casting a look of contempt at my persecutors, I cried, "How do the wicked, who cover their extravagancies with the garb of mystery, and give their crimes the gloss of justice, who, to sanction their impious sloth, dare to consecrate deceits of human original, as the oracles of divinity itself, and persecute the sage who presents to them the torch of truth, because its rays distract the voluptuous repose of their ignorance, oh! how do they despise the plaints of the miserable, while they consume their lives in continual indolence, or only exercise their activity in satisfying their impure desires, or in corrupting the world? How have they torn from merit her most sacred attributes, fame and honor? The people whom their arts have despoiled of the fruits of the field, of the profits of their herds, of the juice of the grape, to lavish them at splendid orgies, do not these very people bow before them, in religious admiration? And you poor wretch, who have only lived to serve Heaven, and fulfil your destiny, who have never suffered your bosom to harbour but one passion, the most pure and holy of all, the love of truth; you, who, the priest of the living God, never ceased to discover his wonders, both in the system of the universe, and the organization of the insect tribe, yet, you see youself deprived of the only blessing for which you sigh, a blessing which even the beasts of the forest and the birds of the air enjoy—Oh, liberty! where is now the eye that watches over the destiny of man? where is the just and impartial hand that distributes the goods of life? The most unworthy are permitted to monopolize them all, whilst the virtuous alone, find themselves deprived of every joy."

"I continued thus to utter the bitterest plaints, until my eyes closed in sleep.—I then beheld an old man advancing towards me with venerable dignity; he stopped by my bedside, and gazed upon me for some time, in silent satisfaction, whilst my looks dwelt with admiration on the pensive cast of his countenance, and on his silvery locks of hair. "Galileo," said he at last, "the pains you now suffer, are in defence of those truths which I formerly taught, and the same fanatacism which now would have tortured me, if death had not snatched me from their power, to the mansions of eternal liberty." "You must be Copernicus," cried I, with earnestness, hugging him to my breast before he could reply. How sweet, my dear Viviani, are the ties of blood, which nature forms! but oh, how much sweeter are those of the soul! how much dearer are the bonds produced by sympathy of pursuit, than those formed by mere relationship! with what eagerness of soul and ardent anticipation of the treasures of science, do we fly to receive the friend whom the hand of philosophy conducts to us!

"Observe," said the sage, after returning my embrace, "I have resumed the envelope in which I was formerly clothed, and I will this day be to you, what I must be more fully at a future period, your guide; for in those celestial regions, where the spirit, freed from the shackles of mortality, is employed, without fatigue, in continual activity, it only finds repose in the variety of its avocations. Our meditations on the perfections of the Divinity, are only interrupted by lessons we give to those who quit life after us, and when you leave the earth, I am appointed to prepare your soul for an acquaintance with the Infinite Being."—After speaking thus, he took me by the hand, and led me to a cloud, which was suspended before us, into which we ascended."

(To be concluded in our next.)

* Galileo was twice cited before the inquisition at Rome, for defending the system of Copernicus, which seemed to contradict the text of the holy scriptures; the second time he remained a long while in prison, under the most painful uncertainty as to his fate; he was finally restored to liberty, on condition, that he should never leave the duchy of Florence.—The most important discoveries that he made in astronomy, either alone, or conjointly with others, are mentioned in this dream. After his restoration he lived at a small villa, which he owned at Ancetri. He there lost his sight, but enjoyed in his last moments, the society of his friend, Viviani, who has since written his life. Viviani's enthusiastic esteem for his friend was so great, that he never signed his own name, without adding to it "The disciple of Galileo."

† Galileo made a formal recantation before the holy tribunal, of his opinion as to the motion of the earth. However, when he was retiring from the presence of the fathers, he was heard to exclaim, "Nevertheless, it moves."

The following important communication, (says the Baltimore Federal Gazette) we give in the words of our correspondent—with one remark.—The writer is of unimpeachable integrity; and, however unexpected this pleasing intelligence, we know it must be the impression at Washington, that the facts are as he states them. We hope by next mail to quiet all doubts on the subject.

"Washington, Feb. 14.—I cannot help repeating the report which was mentioned on Friday, viz. That a treaty has actually been framed between Mr. Rose and our government. It is also said that Mr. Nourse, brother of the register of the treasury, is to carry this treaty to England: this latter circumstance, it is supposed, is in consequence of some doubts as to Mr. Rose's powers.

"There is some talk here that Congress will soon adjourn."

PHILADELPHIA, February 18.

WAR WITH FRANCE.

The aggressions and insults so long heaped upon us by France have at length risen to avowed hostility as will be seen by the subjoined article. As the government have been for several months declaredly in expectation of a foreign war, it is to be presumed that they are in such a state of preparation as to be able to send out to the West-Indies a sufficient number of frigates to protect our homeward bound Indiamen against the cruizers of France and that no time will be lost in doing it.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 13.

The following important extract of a letter from Daniel Crommelin and Sons of Amsterdam, was this morning received by the editors of the New-York Gazette from Daniel Ludlow, Esq. They hasten to lay it before the public.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 30, 1807.

"We have to inform you that this morning we received official intelligence of a proclamation issued by the French Emperor from Milan, respecting the navigation of neutrals—the following are the chief heads of this important state paper:

"Every vessel which has been visited by an English ship, or which has submitted to make a voyage to England, or has paid any duty to the English government, is by this alone declared to have become DENATIONALISE, to have forfeited the rights of her flag, and shall be considered as English property.

"All vessels which thus through the arbitrary measures of the English government have forfeited the rights of their flag, and might come into our harbours or in those of our allies, or might fall into the hands of our ships of war or privateers are declared good and lawful prize.

"Every vessel of whatever nation she may be, or of whatever description her cargo may be, which is cleared out in the harbours of England, or in English colonies, or in places in possession of the English troops, shall be considered good and lawful prize.

"The British islands are declared in a state of blockade both by sea and land!!

"The above decree is dated at Milan, the 17th Dec. 1807."

PEACE WITH ALGIERS.

From the Essex Register of Saturday last.

SALEM, Feb. 6.—By Capt. Chase, who arrived last evening from Malaga, which he left Jan. 7, we received the very important and pleasing information contained in the following Circular.

Capt. C. also informs us, that it was expected at Malaga, that the French would attack Gibralter in a very few days.

Algiers, Dec. 16, 1807.

SIR—You have undoubtedly, before this, heard that three American vessels had been detained by a frigate of this place, in consequence of the annuities for two years past, not having been sent from the United States in Naval and Military Stores, as stipulated by Treaty, notwithstanding the amount thereof has been repeatedly offered in Cash.

These vessels are the ship Eagle, of New-York, Nathaniel Thater, master, from Bristol to Palermo, cargo glass bottles—brig Violet, of Boston, James Merret, master, from Oporto to Leghorn, cargo sugar, hides, indigo, &c.—and sch'r. Mary Ann, of New-York, Ichabod Sheffield, master, from the Straits of Belle-Isle to Leghorn, cargo Fish. The two former have been seen in this port upwards of 40 days.

The sch'r. has not arrived, and is supposed to have made some other port.

The people on board these vessels have been treated very well, and no pillage of any kind has been committed.

I have now the honour to inform you, that I have adjusted this business with the Dey, who has received the amount of two years annuities due, in cash, and the vessels are liberated, and that our commerce will receive no further molestation from the cruizers of this regency.

I pray you will have the goodness to give this as much publicity as possible, for the benefit of all concerned therein.

I have the honor, &c.

TOBIAS LEAR.

Wm. Kirkpatrick, Esq.
Consul U.S.A. at Malaga.

Dec. 17th.—We have this moment heard by an arrival at Leghorn, that the schr. before mentioned has arrived at Naples, having been retaken by the captain and the part of the crew left on board, who threw overboard four of the captors, and put four others into the boat to shift for themselves.

I have myself received no advice of this, and on application to the Dey, who first sent me the information, he assures me it shall not alter the arrangement made yesterday, and that our ships may navigate without fear of molestation.

At present all their cruizers are in port.

I have the honor, &c.

TOBIAS LEAR.

A true copy.
Malaga, Jan. 15, 1808.
WM. KIRKPATRICK.

Captain Dickens, (arrived at New-York) in 28 days from Barbadoes, informs, that he left at Barbadoes, January 23, forty-two sail of American vessels, embargoed, which was laid on the 10th January as a precautionary measure, and still existed when he sailed: he, with one or two Americans were permitted to depart, by petitioning the president of the island. There were 9000 bbls flour afloat in the harbour, besides other provisions, and live stock.

He further informs, that the blockade of Martinique commenced on the 20th January, and was enforced by four frigates.

A bill supplementary to the non-importation act passed the House of Representatives of the United States on Tuesday. The following is the most important of its sections:

"And be it further enacted, that no articles imported from any place on board of any vessel belonging to the citizens of the United States cleared out before the 14th of December last, for any port within the United States, or the territories thereof, shall be subject to the prohibition enacted by the act to which this is a supplement."

The bill has not yet passed the Senate.

A letter from Havanna, of the 27th January, states, "That they had received the nws of the embargo act: but there was then in port, provisions for four months. The ordinary consumption here and the vicinity, is about five thousand barrels per month."

CHARLESTON, Feb. 3.—Capt. Lopez in 7 days from Havanna, informs, that the alarm of an attack from the British, increased at that place: dispatches had been received from Spain, stating that three expeditions had sailed from England, one of which was destined either against Cuba or Mexico. He states, that there were 75,000 men in arms in the island ready to receive them, and that every class of the inhabitants were vieing with each other in their exertions to give them a warm reception, should they attempt a landing. A number of merchants had come forward and offered to loan the government any sums of money they might be in want of, and supplies of flour, &c. for the army.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Philadelphia, to a friend in George town.

"Yesterday between 12 and 1 o'clock Doct. Physick took away a very large POLYPUS from the nose and throat of JOHN REEDER.—The size is almost incredible. The part that lay nearest the throat looks like a heart; rather larger than that of the largest Turkey Cock —perhaps as large as that of a young lamb. The remaining part was the thickness of the nostril in which it lay. It was taken away root and branch, without the loss of much blood, and John can now breathe through his nose.—Doct. Physick has gained much applause by this operation. He means to preserve the polypus in spirits. He attempted to take it out on Saturday; I was then present, but the silver wire broke. Yesterday I was not present, but I am informed he broke another wire. He then waxed a piece of tape and wrapped another wire with it; and succeeded. The operation was somewhat similar to the manner of taking a cork out a bottle with a string. He first got his wire over it so as to tear it loose, and then took it out at his mouth.

HORSE BILLS

English Education.

SAMUEL KINGSTON,

RESPECTFULLY informs the inhabitants of Pittsburgh and its vicinity, that he will open School on the 6th of April next, in Mrs. Irwin's Long Room, corner of Market street and the Diamond, where the following branches of literature will be taught with accuracy and dispatch;—

Book keeping, both by single and double entry, after the most approved English and Italian methods. Trigonometry and practical Geometry, with their application in the mensuration of Superfices and Solids. Navigation, in a plain and concise manner, with its practical use in Surveying. Each scholar in this department will be charged five dollars per quarter.

Scholars in Spelling, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, English Grammar and Geography, will pay three dollars per quarter.

The teacher, from various considerations, deems it expedient that the parents, guardians and masters of the pupils consigned to his care, should convene early in the first quarter, for the purpose of nominating a competent number of respectable citizens, who may as often at least as once a month, visit the School, observe the discipline enforced, inpect the management of the institution, and finally acquaint themselves with the proficiency of the scholars in their different departments. The result of this measure will, he flatters himself, not only excite emulation in the Scholars, but likewise conduce to obviate ill-founded censures, and more effectually enable his employers to form a proper estimate of his attention and abilities.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 29, 1808.

To be let on ground rent forever,

Part of LOT No. 311, in the Borough of Pittsburgh, fronting on Third street, sixty feet, and extending back towards Fourth street, eighty feet. Possession may be had immediately. For terms apply to Pittsburgh, January 25, 1808.

By yesterday's Mail.

PHILADELPHIA, February 19.

We have been favored with the perusal of several letters from members of congress at the city of Washington, received by yesterday's mail. Although the writers (of the same political denomination) do not agree in the particulars which they state, relative to the precise situation of our foreign relations, they express a complete coincidence as to the general aspect of our external prospects. Some difficulty, merely in matters of national etiquette, appear to have occurred in the discussions with Mr. Rose. These cannot be surmounted until advice is received from Europe. But such is the posture of our concerns, with England and France, that an adjournment of congress, for the present is deemed compatible with the public interest.

It will be observed that Mr. Dawson has moved this subject in the house of representatives. Mr. Dawson is believed to be fully in the confidence of the government; and, it is said, mentioned the subject of adjourning congress to the president, who, it is added, approved the measure, but intended, previous to their rising, to make an important communication. This would have been done on Tuesday last, but it is supposed Mr. Madison's indisposition occasioned the delay. As this gentleman had so far recovered on Wednesday, as to attend to business, the next mail will probably furnish us with the expected communication.

WASHINGTON-CITY, Feb. 20.

THE NEGOCIATION.

We hear, and we believe the information correct, that a suspension of the negociation between our government and that of Great-Britain, took place on Thursday. It is said that our government require Mr Rose to specify the reparation his government is willing to make for the attack on the Chesapeake—while Mr. Rose has required that our government should previously rescind the proclamation issued on that occasion.—It is presumed, however, that the present aspect of affairs in Europe will induce one of the parties to yield. We sincerely hope that an amicable termination may take place, and it is our opinion that such will be the final issue.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

STOLEN out of the yard of Mr. John Caldwell, at the ferry on the Monongahela river opposite Pittsburgh, on Tuesday night the 16th inst. a dark bay HORSE, about 12 years old, between 14 and 15 hands high, a large star in his forehead, thick bushy mane, and one hind foot white, heavy made, and is a complete horse for the geers, and had round his neck a leather strap with a chain fastened to it. It is supposed that the thief is a certain Matthew Parks, who is stout made, has thick lips and very talkative; he had on a blue cloth coat & a pair of light coloured pantaloons. The above reward will be paid for securing said Horse so that the owner may get him again and the thief brought to justice, or for the Horse only Ten Dollars and reasonable charges, if delivered to Mr. Caldwell, or the subscriber living near Canonsburgh, Washington county.
